VIRGIL Y. MOORE

Wins Signal Honors at The Oratorical Contest.

The annual debate between Kentucky State College and Kentucky University, which was held Friday evening in Morrison Chapel at Kentucky University in Lexington was won by State College, the vote of the judges being 4 to 1 in favor of the victor. The subject for debate was "Resolved, That the United States Government Would be Justifiable in Establishing Her Permanent Rule in Cuba." State College took the negative.

The State College representatives were Beverly Todd Towery and Virgil Y. Moore, of this city, and R. L. McPherson, Somerset, Ky.

Kentucky University was represented by H. M. Stansifer, R. B. Hutcheart, Jr., and M. E. Dutt. The judges were C. N. Manning, Dr. R. C. Falconer, B. C. Hagerman, Dr. J. M. Spence, of Lexington and Judge Denis Dundon, of Paris. A handsome gold medal was awarded to each representative of the winning team.

The Lexington Leader says: The contest Friday evening was interesting and the subject matter was well handled by each of the debaters. In the midst of college yells and unbounded enthusiasm, Moore, of the K. S. C. team, stood out as the most effective speaker. He spoke second for State and made the rebuttal speech. His first was a seeming attempt at oratory and was not as forcible as it might have been if shorn of its oratorical flourishes. But when Moore came on for rebuttal he took the situation in hand and clinched K. S. C.'s victory. He scored point after point that left the affirmative helpless to answer. He brought storms of applause from his supporters and admiration from the audience. In fact by the force of his strong rebuttal speech Moore is the boy "who bit the onion." He is only 17 years old.

Standing conspicuously aloof from his colleagues in point of argumentation and personal power in debate was Virgil Yandell Moore, a lad of 17 years of age. Long before the debate was closed it was manifest that the contest had resolved itself into battle between H. M. Stansifer the sturdy Crimmon defender and young Moore. In his rebuttal arguments Stansifer regained several lost points for the affirmative.

Mr. Stansifer opened the argument by stating that for moral, commercial and political reasons the United States should establish her permanent rule in Cuba. He also added that his colleagues would present to view the same reasons from a sanitary and educational standpoint to the advantage of the Cubans themselves as well as the United States.

Beverly Todd Towery stated that according to the Platt amendment and national honor involved it would be a violation of the fundamental principles of the government of the United States to establish a rule in Cuba against the wishes of the people.

Mr. Moore, in arguing for the negative stated that the meaning of the word "justifiable" was a basic principle and its original meaning meant "law."

It would not be according to law or justice for the United States to establish a permanent rule in Cuba, he said "our relations with Cuba are as fixed as the fundamental principles of one form of government."

"I have to much faith in the American people," he said "to believe they will for once enter the forbidden path which would lead to ruin."—Lexington Herald.

Sudden Death of Irene Stone.

The entire city was thrown into gloom last Tuesday morning, when the news was circulated that Irene Stone, the beautiful little eleven year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Stone, had died suddenly and most unexpectedly the night before a little after eleven o'clock. The death was so sudden, as to daze her parents and all her friends. She had been indisposed with a sore throat and tonsillitis for several days, but was out of school only three days last week and every one was quite unprepared for the rude shock which the news of her death gave them. She was eleven years old the first day of this month, and on that occasion celebrated her birth day by inviting her little friends to her party, which was a joyous occasion to them all.

The funeral was held at the residence at two o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, and the burial took place in the new cemetery, Rev. Benjamin Andres officiating assisted by Rev. J. H. Butler.

The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. One design being from the third grade in the Marion Graded School to which Irene belonged, another was from the Presbyterian Sunday School, still another was from the "Willing Workers," and the last resting place of the dear little form was covered completely with flowers. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of every one in their great affliction.

To Road Overseers.

The time has come when our public roads can be worked. The excessive rains of the winter have left many of our roads in bad condition, and I must insist that overseers look after their roads at once. Now is the time to work roads to get best results. The fiscal court has fixed the price of plow and team at $1.50 per day, a day on road means eight hours of work, not play. Some overseers have in the past used too many teams and have not had teams worked as they should have done. You are expected this year to use teams only when actually needed, and to see that the county receives eight hours of good work every day that team is reported.

Remember that you as overseer have made a sworn statement as to work done on your road and you can not be too careful in seeing that the county is not imposed upon. I want to urge you to push the work this year and do it now.

The fiscal court has planned to use road grader on such parts of roads in different sections of county as they can be advantageously used, but wherever graders are used the hands will be required to work at least six days, working such places as grader will not work.

Mr. W. A. Woodall will have the management of the graders, and I trust the overseers on roads when graders are used will heartily cooperate with him in the work. It is impossible for all of the roads to be graded in one year, but the work will be distributed so as to give all sections, where graders can be used, a share of the work.

W. A. BLACKBURN,
County Judge.

Pogue Mine to the Front.

After laying idle for many months and it being the opinion of many that it would never be worked again, this mine is now just in its infancy. The Marion Mineral Co. have been lucky in securing the services of our old friend, R. B. Clement, to manage this mine. Through his untiring efforts and plans devised by himself he has succeeded in driving a drift through broken ground and slush to the vein where thousands of tons of ore are in sight and is now being taken out as fast as it can be handled by two shifts of men working day and night.

Mr. Clement has for a long time been counted one of the best mining engineers in this district, and his excellent judgment coupled with his knowledge of formation and location he is second to none. Hurrah for R. B.!

Revival Meeting.

Services at the Presbyterian church have been well attended last week and this week. Rev. W. H. Miley of Louisville formerly pastor of the church here is conducting the services and his sermons are forcible and dignified. The church will be much benefited by his visit here at this time.

MARION CHORAL SOCIETY

Entertainment a Grand Success and Was Attended by a Large and Appreciative Audience

The Marion Choral Society made its first appearance before the public Tuesday night and was greeted with a large and enthusiastic audience. They were very ably assisted by the Amphion Quartette, of Henderson, Miss Tommie Lyle Waller, of Morgantown, and Mr. Chap Blackwell, of Henderson.

Prof. Von Tobel, a musician, of Henderson, has been training our vocal talent for some several weeks and assisted by the singers noted above gave us a very beautiful and artistic entertainment. Prof. Von Tobel deserves praise and commendation for his painstaking and careful work with our vocal talent. It was certainly reflected in every chorus to a marked degree.

THE PRESS-RECORD takes the liberty to say however that he played his piano selections over some heads in place of at all hearts. This however might have been more noticeable to the writer than others and at any rate he is not responsible for imperfections in his audience. Every one liked Von Tobel. He is one musician out of many without frills. He stays close to his work through an entire program and is devoid of the usual clap-trap devices made only for effect.

The Amphion Quartette were very warmly welcomed in their first number. Their voices have been heard in the chorus and the ladies in solos and the audience were prepared for just what they heard—a splendid number well rendered. The singing of Misses Watson, Spoehr and Waller was well done and fully appreciated by the audience.

One of the best things in the whole program was Barnaby's "Sweet and Low" rendered by the chorus. The expression in this was to our mind almost perfection. This is one of the most beautiful pieces of music ever written. It can only be appreciated when sung correctly seasoned with expression by a musician of ability.

The distinctive feature in this song is the blowing of the wind in the next to the last bar and the conductor succeeded in making this effect very realistic. This number alone was worth the price of admission.

The audience was very generous with applause and the entertainment taken as a whole was a goodly performance.

Princeton Presbytery.

Princeton Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., met at Madisonville, Ky., Tuesday, Apr. 16, 1907 at 7:30, p. m. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. R. Henry, of Paducah, Ky., from John 14:16. Rev. A. J. Thompson was elected Moderator. Eight ordained ministers were present and fifteen congregations represented.

The usual presbyterial sacramental service was held Wednesday at 11 o'clock. J. W. Maddox was taken under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. Letters were granted to candidates W. C. Hart, who is now in school at Los Angeles, Cal., and to T. J. Garner, who is in school at Chicago.

The committees on Home Missions, Evangelism and Ministerial Relief made able reports. Other committees made important reports.

We have in the Presbytery ten C. E. Society, and two Children's Bands. The commissioners to the General Assembly are Rev. M. E. Chappell and Jas. West. Presbytery adjourned to meet in Princeton, Ky., May 14, 8 p. m.

FRITTS-NEAL

Sunday afternoon at the residence of the Rev. Elgin, Mr. Fritts and Miss Lola Neal were united in the bonds of holy matrimony Rev. Elgin officiating. The bride is well known in Marion and numbers her friends by the score. The groom is the son of R. C. Fritts a well known farmer of the Fredonia neighborhood. They left on the 3:30 train for Gracy Ky., accompanied as far as Princeton by Bertha Fritts, John Fritts and Maud Clark. Their friends wish them a happy life.

Fisher-Malecom.

Mr. Geo. Fisher and Miss Grace Malecom were married by Rev. W. R. Gibbs at his home in Sheridan last Sunday at three o'clock in the presence of a large crowd which gathered in. They were accompanied by Miss Jessie Malecom, the bride's sister, and Mr. Lee Kemper.

Mr. Fisher is a grocer at Lola and a young man who stands well in his community.

The bride is John Neal's daughter and is an attractive young lady. The happy couple will reside at Lola where the groom is in business, and they have the best wishes of every one who knows them.

McWilliams Special

It belongs to the stories that never were told, this of the McWilliams Special. But it happened years ago, and for that matter McWilliams is dead. It wasn't grief that killed him either, though at one time his grief came uncommunally near killing us.

It is an odd sort of a yarn, too, because one part of it never got to headquarters, and another part of it never got from headquarters.

How, for instance, the mysterious car was ever started from Chicago on such a delicious schedule, how many men in the service know that even yet?

How, for another instance, Sinclair and Francis took the ratty old car reeling into Denver with the glass shivered, the paint blistered, the hose burned and a tire sprung on one of the Five-Nine's drivers, how many headquarters slaves know that?

Our end of the story never went in at all—never went in because it was not deemed—well, essential to the getting up of the annual report. We could have raised their hair; they could have raised our salaries; but they didn't; we didn't.

In telling this story I would not be misunderstood. Ours is not the only line between Chicago and Denver. There are others, I admit it. But there is only one line, all the same, that could have taken the McWilliams Special, as we did, out of Chicago at 4 in the evening and put it in Denver long before noon the next day.

A communication came from a great La Salle street banker to the president of our road. Next the second vice president heard of it, but in this way:

"Why have you turned down Peter McWilliams' request for a special to Denver this afternoon?" asked the president.

"He wants too much," came back over the private wire. "We can't do it."

After satisfying himself on this point the president called up La Salle street.

"Our folks say, Mr. McWilliams, we simply can't do it."

"You must do it."

"When will the car be ready?"

"At 3 o'clock."

"When must it be in Denver?"

"Ten o'clock tomorrow morning."

The president nearly jumped the wire.

"McWilliams, you're crazy. What on earth do you mean?"

The talk came back so low that the wires hardly caught it. There were occasional outbursts such as, "Situation is extremely critical," "Grave danger," "Acute distress," "Must help me out."

But none of this would ever have moved the president had not Peter McWilliams been a bigger man than most corporations, and a personal request from Peter, if he stuck for it, could hardly be refused, and for this he most decidedly stuck.

"I tell you it will turn us upside down," stormed the president.

"Do you recollect," asked Peter McWilliams, "when your infernal old pot of a road was built eight years ago—you were turned inside out then, weren't you? And hung up to dry, weren't you?"

The door was quietly opened by a sad-eyed man.

The president did recollect. He could not decently help recollecting. And he recollected how, about that same time, Peter McWilliams had one week taken up for him a matter of two millions floating with a personal check and carried it eighteen months without security when money could not be had in Wall street on government bonds.

Do you—that is, have you heretofore supposed that a railroad belongs to the stockholders? Not so. It belongs to men like Mr. McWilliams, who own it when they need it. At other times they let the stockholders carry it—until they want it again.

"We'll do what we can, Peter," replied the president, desperately amiable. "Goodby."

I am giving you only an inkling of how it started, not a word as to how countless orders were issued and countless schedules were canceled, not a paragraph about numberless trains abandoned in toto and numberless others pulled and hauled and held and annulled. The McWilliams Special in a twinkling tore a great system into great splinters.

It set master mechanics by the ears and made reckless falsifiers of previously conservative trainmen. It made minding enemies of rival superintendents and inept parodies of jolly train dispatchers. It shivered us from end to end and stem to stern, but it covered 1,026 miles of the best steel in the world in rather better than twenty hours and a blaze of glory.

"My word is out," said the president in his message to all superintendents thirty minutes later. "You will get your division schedule in a few moments. Send no reasons for inability to make it. Simply deliver the goods. With your time report, which comes by Dy. M. S., I want the name and record of every member of every train crew and every engine crew that hauls the McWilliams car." Then followed particular injunctions of secrecy. Above all, the newspapers must not get it.

But where newspapers are secrecy can only be hoped for, never attained. In spite of the most elaborate precautions to preserve Peter McWilliams' secret—would you believe it?—the evening papers had half a column, practically the whole thing. Of course they had to guess at some of it, but for a newspaper story it was pretty correct, just the same. They had to a minute the time of the start from Chicago and hinted broadly that the schedule was a hair-raiser, something to make previous very fast records previous very slow records. And—here in a secret was the secret—the train was to carry a prominent Chicago capitalist to the bedside of his dying son, Philip McWilliams, in Denver. Further, that hourly bulletins were being wired to the distressed father and that every effort of science would be put forth to keep the unhappy boy alive until his father could reach Denver on the special. Lastly, it was hoped by all the evening papers (to fill on the half hour column space) that sunrise would see the anxious parent well on toward the gateway of the Rockies.

Of course the morning papers from the Atlantic to the Pacific had the story reported, scare headed, in fact, and the public were laughing at our people's dogged refusal to confirm the report or to be interviewed at all on the subject. The papers had the story anyway. What did they care for our efforts to screen a private distress which insisted on so paralyzing a time card for 1,026 miles?

When our own, the west end of the schedule, came over the wires there was a universal, a vociferous, kick. Dispatchers, superintendents of motive power, train master, everybody, protested. We were given about seven hours to cover 400 miles—the fastest percentage, by the way, on the whole run.

"This may be grief for young McWilliams and for his dad," grumbled the chief dispatcher that evening as he cribbed the press dispatches going over the wires about the special, "but the grief is not theirs alone."

Then he made a protest to Chicago. What the answer was none but himself ever knew. It came personal, and as took it personally, but the manner in which he went to work clearing track and making a card for the McWilliams Special showed better speed than the train itself ever attempted, and he kicked no more.

After all the row it seems incredible, but they never got ready to leave Chicago till 4 o'clock, and when the McWilliams Special lit into our train system it was like dropping a mountain lion into a bunch of steers.

Freights and extras, local passenger trains even, were used to being sidetracked, but when it came to laying out the driers and (I whisper this) the White Mail and the Manila express the all began to sizzle in the journal boxes. The freight business, the passenger traffic, the mail schedules of a whole railway system were actually knocked by the McWilliams Special into a cocked hat.

From the minute it cleared Western avenue it was the only thing talked of. Divisional headquarters and car link shuttles alike were bursting with excitement.

On the West End we had all night to prepare, and at 5 o'clock next morning every man in the operating department was on edge. At precisely 3:58 a. m. the McWilliams Special stuck its nose into our division, and Foley—pulled off No. 1 with the 400—was heading her lizzy for McCloud. Already the McWilliams had made up thirty-one minutes on the one hour delay in Chicago, and Lincoln threw her into our hands with a sort of "There now, you fellows! Are you any good at all on the West End?" And we thought we were. Sitting in the dispatcher's office, we tagged her down the line like a swallow—Harvard, Oxford, Zanesville, Ash-ton—and a thousand people at the McCloud station waited for 6 o'clock and for Foley's mucky cap to pop through the Blackwood bluffs, watched him stain the valley maples with a stream of white and black, scream at the junction switches, tear and crash through the yards and slide hissing and panting up under our nose, swing out of his cab and look at nobody at all but his watch.

We made it 5:59 a. m. Central time; the miles, 136; the minutes, 121. The schedule was beaten and that with the 136 miles the fastest on the whole 1,026. Everybody in town yelled except Foley. He asked for a chew of tobacco and, not getting one handily, bit into his own piece.

While Foley melted his weed George Sinclair stepped out of the superintendent's office—he was done in a black silk shirt, with a blue four-in-hand streaming over his front—stepped out to shake hands with Foley as one hostler got the 400 out of the way and another backed down with a new skyscraper, the 503.

But nobody paid much attention to all this. The mob had swarmed around the ratty, old, blind-eyed baggage car which, with an ordinary way ear, constituted the McWilliams Special.

"Now, what does a man with McWilliams' money want to travel special in an old photograph gallery like that for?" asked Andy Cameron, who was the least bit huffed because he hadn't been marked up for the run himself. "You better take him in a cup of hot coffee. Sinkers" suggested Andy to the lunch counter boy. "You might get a ten dollar bill if the old man isn't feeling too badly. What do you hear from Denver, Neighbor?" he asked, turning to the superintendent of motive power. "Is the boy holding out?"

"I'm not worrying about the boy holding out; it's whether the Five-Nine will hold out."

"Aren't you going to change engines and crews at Arickaree?"

"Not today," said Neighbor grimly. "We haven't time."

Just then Sinkers rushed at the baggage car with a cup of hot coffee for Mr. McWilliams. Everybody, hoping to get a peep at the capitalist, made way. Sinkers climbed over the train chests which were lashed to the platforms and pounded on the door. He pounded hard, for he hoped and believed that there was something in it. But he might have pounded till his coffee froze for all the impression it made on the sleepy McWilliams.

"Hasn't the man trouble enough without tacking your chillery?" sang out Felix Kennedy, and the laugh so discouraged Sinkers that he gave over and sneaked away.

At that moment the editor of the local paper came around the depot corner on the run. He was out for an interview and, as usual, just a trifle late. However, he insisted on boarding the baggage car to tender his sympathy to McWilliams.

The barricades bothered him, but he mounted them all and began an emergency pound on the forbidding blind door. Imagine his feelings when the door was gently opened by a sad-eyed man, who opened the hall by shoving a life as big as a pinch bar under the editorial nose.

"My grief, Mr. McWilliams," protested the interviewer in a trembling voice, "don't imagine I want to hold you up. Our citizens are all peaceable."

"Get out!"

"Why, man, I'm not even asking for a subscription. I simply want to tell—"

"Get out!" snapped the man with the gun, and in a foam the newsman dimpled down. A curious crowd gathered close to hear an editorial version of the Ten Commandments revised on the spur of the moment. Felix Kennedy said it was worth going miles to hear. "That's the coldest deal I ever struck on the plains, boys," declared the editor. "Talk about your benevolent parents. If the boy doesn't have a chill when that man reaches him I miss my guess. He acts to me as if he was afraid his grief would get away before he got to Denver."

Meantime George Sinclair was trying a silk handkerchief around his neck, while Neighbor gave him parting injunctions. As he put up his foot to swing into the cab the boy looked for all the world like a jockey, toe in thrump. Neighbor glanced at his watch. "Can you make it by 11 o'clock?" he growled.

"Make what?"

"Denver—or the ditch, Neighbor," laughed George, testing the air. "Are you right back there, Pat?" he called as Conductor Francis strode forward to compare the mountain time.

"Right and tight, and I call it five-thirty-two now. What have you, George?"

"Five-thirty-two," answered Sinclair, leaving from the cab window. "And we're ready."

"Then go," cried Pat Francis, raising two fingers.

"Go!" echoed Sinclair, and waved a backward smile to the crowd as the ditions took the push and the escapes wheezed.

A roar went up. The little engineer shook his cap, and with a flitting, snaking slide the McWilliams Special drew slipping away between the shining rails for the Rockies.

Just how McWilliams felt we had no means of knowing, but we knew our hearts would not beat freely until his eternal special should slide safely over the last of the 206 miles which still lay between the distressed man and his unfortunate child.

From McCloud to Ogallala there is a good bit of twisting and steering, but looking east from Athens a marble dropped between the rails might roll clear into the Ogallala yard. It is a sixty-mile grade, a half mile of slag and the sweetest of all roads, and under steel.

To cover those sixty miles in better than fifty minutes was like picking them off the pines, and the Five-Nine breasted the Morgan divide, fretting for more hills to climb.

The Five-Nine—for that matter any of the skyscrapers are built to balance ten or a dozen sleepers, and when you run them light they have a fashion of rearing their noses into the track. A modest up grade just about counters this tendency, but on a slump and a stiff clip and no rail to speak of you feel as if the drivers were going to back up on the pines every once in awhile. However, they never do, and George whistled for Scarboro Junction and 150 miles and two winters in “Bridge burning ahead there.”

“Bridge burning?” he cried, looking nervously forward. “Well, that’s a deal! What you going to do about it?”

“Run it. Are you McWilliams?”

“McWilliams? I wish I was for just one minute. I’m one of his clerks.”

“Where is he?”

“I left him on La Salle street yesterday afternoon.”

“What’s your name?”

“Mr. plain Ferguson.”

“Well, Ferguson, it’s none of my business, but as long as we’re going to put you into the river or into the river in about a minute I’m curious to know what the biases you’re hustling along this way for?”

“Me? I’ve got $1,200,000 in gold coin in this car for the Sierra Leone National bank that’s all. Didn’t you know that five big banks there closed their doors yesterday? Worst panic in the United States. That’s what I’m here for and five hundred miles with me eating and sleeping in this car,” continued Ferguson, looking ahead. “You’re not going to tackle that bridge, are you?”

“We are and right off. If there’s any of your hunkies want to drop out, now’s their chance,” said Pat Francis as Sinclair slowed up for his run.

Ferguson called his men. The five, with their rifles, came cautiously forward.

“Boys,” said Ferguson briefly, “there’s a bridge afore ahead. These guys are going to try to run it. It’s not in your contract, that kind of a chance. Do you want to get off? I stay with the specie, myself. You can do exactly as you please. Murray, what do you say?” he asked, addressing the leader of the force, who appeared to weigh about 250.

“What do I say?” echoed Murray, with decision, as he looked for a safe place to alight alongside the track. “I say I’ll drop out right here. I don’t mind train robbers, but I don’t tackle a burning bridge—not if I know it,” and he jumped off.

“Well, Peaters,” asked Ferguson of the second man coolly, “do you want to stay?”

“Me?” echoed Peaters, looking ahead at the mass of flame leaping upward. “Me stay? Well, not in a thousand years. You can have my gun, Mr. Ferguson, and send me—check to 430 Milwaukee avenue, please. Gentlemen, good day,” and off went Peaters.

And off went every last man of the valorous detectives except one lame fellow, who said he would just as lief be dead as alive anyway and declared he would stay with Ferguson and die rich.

Sinclair, thinking he might never get another chance, was whistling sharply for orders. Francis, breathless with the news, ran forward.

The Five-Nine gathered herself with a spring. Even the engineer’s heart quailed as they got away. He knew his business, and he knew that if only the rails hadn’t buckled they were perfectly safe, for the heavy truss would stand a lot of burning before giving way under a swiftly moving train. Only, as they flew nearer, the bridge rolling up in dense volume looked like a fireball. After all, it was foolhardy, and he felt it, but he was past the stopping now, and he pulled the choke to the limit. It seemed as if she never covered steel so fast. Under the head she now had the crackling bridge was less than five hundred, four hundred, three hundred, two hundred feet, and there was no longer time to think. With a stare, Sinclair shut off. He wanted no push or pull on the track. The McWilliams Special was just a tremendous arrow, shooting through a truss of fire and half a dozen speechless men on either side of the river waiting for the catastrophe.

Jerry MacElroy yelled. The engineer didn’t even look around, only whistled in alarm back to Pat Francis, eased her down the grade a bit, like a man reflecting, and watched the smoke and flames that rose to bar the McWilliams Special out of Denver.

The Five-Nine skinned across the meadows without a break and pulled up a hundred feet from the burning bridge. It was an old Howe truss and snapped like popcorn as the flames bit into the rotten shed.

Pat Francis and his brakeman ran forward. Across the river they could see half a dozen section men chasing wildly about throwing impotent buckets of water on the burning truss.

“We’re up against it, George,” cried Francis.

“Not if we can get across before the bridge tumbles into the river,” returned Sinclair.

“You don’t mean you’d try it?”

“Would I? Wouldn’t I? You know the orders. That bridge is good for an hour yet. Pat, if you’re game I’ll run it.”

“Holy smoke!” mused Pat Francis, who would have run the river without any bridge at all if so ordered. “They told us to deliver the goods, didn’t they?”

“We might as well be starting, Pat,” suggested Jerry MacElroy, who deprecated losing good time. “There’ll be plenty of time to talk after we get into Denver or the Mattaback.”

“Think quick, Pat,” urged Sinclair. His safety was popping louder.

“Back her up, then, and let her go!” cried Francis. “I’d just as lief have that baggage car at the bottom of the river as on my hands any longer!”

There was some sharp tooting; then the McWilliams Special backed; backed away across the meadow, halted and screamed hard enough to wake the dead. George was trying to warn the section men. At that instant the door of the baggage car opened, and a sharp featured young man peered out.

“What’s the row? What’s all this screaming about, conductor?” he asked as Francis passed.

its minutes out of McCloud, and, looking happy, cursed Mr. McWilliams a little and gave her another half of steam.

It is getting down a hill, like the hills of the Mattaback valley, at such a pace that pounds the track out of shape. The Five-Nine lurched at the curves like a mad woman, shook free with very fury, and if the baggage car had not been fairly loaded down with the grief of McWilliams it must have jumped the rails a dozen times in as many minutes.

Indeed the fireman—it was Jerry MacElroy—twisting and shifting between the tender and the furnace, looked for the first time grave and stole a questioning glance from the steam gauge toward George.

But yet he didn’t expect to see the boy, his face set ahead and down the track, straighten so suddenly up, sink in the lever and close at the instant on the air. Jerry felt her stumble under his feet—caught up like a girl in a kidnapping rope—and, grabbing a brace, looked like a wise stoker, for his answer out of his window. There far ahead it rose in hot curling clouds of smoke down among the alfalfa meadows and over the sweep of willows along the Mattaback river. The Mattaback bridge was on fire, with the McWilliams Special on one side and Denver on the other.

Jerry MacElroy yelled. The engineer didn’t even look around, only whistled in alarm back to Pat Francis, eased her down the grade a bit, like a man reflecting, and watched the smoke and flames that rose to bar the McWilliams Special out of Denver.

“What’s the row? What’s all this screaming about, conductor?” he asked as Francis passed.

“What the dence have you bit into?” cried the depot master as the Five-Nine swept splendidly up and stopped with her battered eye hard on the depot clock.

“Mattaback bridge is burned. Had to crawl over on the stringers,” answered Sinclair, coughing up a chunder.

“Where’s the McWilliams?”

“Back there sitting on his grief, I reckon.”

While the crew went up to register two big four horse trucks backed up to the baggage car, and in a minute a dozen men were rolling specie kegs out of the door, which was smashed in, as being quicker than to tear open the barricades.

Sinclair, MacElroy and Francis with his brakeman were surrounded by a crowd of railroad men. As they stood answering questions a big prosperous looking banker with black rings under his eyes pushed in toward them, accompanied by the lame fellow, who had missed the chance of a lifetime to die rich, and by Ferguson, who had told the story.

The banker shook hands with each one of the crew. “You’ve saved us, boys. We needed it. There’s a mob of 5,000 of the worst scared people in America clamoring at the doors, and, by the eternal, now we’re fixed for every one of them. Come up to the bank. I want you to ride right up with the coin, all of you.”

It was an uncommonly queer occasion, but an uncommonly enthusiastic one. Fifty policemen made the escort and cleared the way for the trucks to pull up across the sidewalk so the porters could lug the kegs of gold into the bank before the very eyes of the rattled depositors.

In an hour the run was broken. But when the four railroad men left the bank after all sorts of hugging by excited directors they carried not only the blessings of the officials, but each in his vest pocket a check, every one of which discounted the biggest voucher ever drawn on the West End for a month’s pay, though I violate no confidence in stating that George Sinclair was bigger than any two of the others. And this is how it happens that there hangs in the directors’ room of the Sierra Leone National a very creditable portrait of the kid engineer.

Besides paying tariff on the specie, the bank paid for a new coat of paint for the McWilliams Special from canvas to pilot. She was the last train across the Mattaback for two weeks.

Professor Swallowtail It All.

The scholarly William E. Byerly, professor of mathematics at Harvard, was once asked by a student how to develop a retentive memory. The professor answered that ordinary mental exercise was sufficient to secure a good memory, whereas the student asked if he might test the mental capacity of his instructor. Professor Byerly agreed, and the student asked him to listen to and remember several varied items for a test. He began:

“One quart of whisky.”

“One,” said the professor.

“Six pounds of sugar, a pint of sour milk, three onions, half a gallon of molasses and two raw eggs.”

“One,” said the professor.

“Two green apples, twenty-six peanuts, one and a half cucumbers and four mince pies.”

“One,” said the professor.

“A package of starch, sixty-seven cakes of yeast and the skins of seven bananas. Got that down?”

“Yes,” answered Dr. Byerly.

“How does it taste?” asked the student.—Boston Herald.

Close Questioning.

In recalling incidents connected with Virginia politics some years ago a prominent Virginian recently related to a Washington man an account of an investigation of election frauds in the lower section of the state. In the course of the proceedings it developed that the ballots in an important precinct had not been sealed after the final count, thereby being exposed to fraudulent practices. The chairman of the investigating committee closely questioned the election judge as to why the prescribed duty of carefully securing the ballots had been neglected.

“Could you not obtain any mullage in the town?”

“No, sir.”

“Could you not procure some sealing wax—some shoemaker’s wax, if nothing else?”

“No, sir.”

“Well, then, sir, why didn’t you go out into the woods and get some resin? Do you mean to tell me that there were no pine trees around there shedding tears at your infamous rascality?”—Washington Star.

The Bible of the Poor.

The “Bible of the Poor” was one of the most interesting of the early block books, which were printed in Belgium in the fourteenth century, before the use of movable type, from blocks. The book consisted of forty leaves, printed on one side, making twenty when pasted together, and gave a pictorial representation of scenes from the life and passion of our Lord, with suitable inscriptions from holy writ in the abbreviated Latin of the period. The “Biblia Pauperum,” as it was called, was intended as an aid to devotion for the use of poor persons who could not afford to buy complete copies of the Bible. Originally the book is believed to have been specially designed for the poor friars, who found the pictures useful when they went about preaching, to illustrate their sermons and to rouse the interest of their congregations. A richly illuminated MS. of the “Bible of the Poor,” executed in the Netherlands about 1400, is kept in the British Museum. An early copy of the “Biblia Pauperum” was sold some years ago for 245 guineas.

Dick Is a Lonesome Swan.

Dick is the name of a lone swan at Mount Washington cemetery. A few months ago Dick's mate was killed and eaten right before his eyes by a red fox.

He made all the noise possible and flapped his wings in an effort to frighten the fox away. It was a cold night and the fox was hungry. Dick was slightly wounded in the effort to protect his mate. Since its death Dick has gone into mourning. For days at a time he hides among the weeds in the edge of the water in the lake, taking only an occasional bath in the deep water.

The attendants at the cemetery try to force Dick to mate with other swans, but he obstinately refuses. He is true to his first and only love. Like the ostrich, the swan mates only once.—Exchange.

Definition of Statesman.

The popular conception of a statesman of the first rank is that he is a man who is wise in all that pertains to government; that he is discreet, self-contained, and well balanced; that he never allows his prejudices to run away with his judgment; that he is dignified in manner and practices always that sobriety of speech which is most becoming in men of exalted position. This was the American ideal for many years. Perhaps it is the ideal even now of the majority of the citizens of this republic, albeit times have changed.

We are authorized to announce
R. H. THOMAS

a candidate for Assessor, to fill out the unexpired term of J. Anthony Davidson, subject to the action of the Republican party. He endorses the local option law.

If Jas. J. Hill would just devote himself to hauling the freight up in his own that has been waiting for some months for its turn, and would do less worrying about the business future, he would make a great hit with a large number of people in this

Mr. Harriman seems much more about his railroad combinations.

CHURCH NOTES

Rev. D. M. Green, the venerable Baptist Divine who has spent a long and useful career in the ministry, filled the pulpit at the Baptist church Sunday, taking his text from the first chapter of John 26 to 29 verses,
"Behold the Lamb of God Which Taketh Away the Sins of the World,"

Princeton Presbytery.

Princeton Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian church held its regular Spring Session at Crayne-ville April 9-11. Retiring Moderator, Rev. I. G. Joiner, preached the opening sermon. G. H. Whitecotton, of Sullivan, was elected Moderator. Twenty-nine out of the thirty-five churches of the original Princeton Presbytery may be counted in the loyal line, twenty-three being represented by delegates, twenty-four churches of the twenty-nine sending in the regular presbyterial dues.

The committees made interesting and encouraging reports showing that the work after the late disruption is being shaped along in pregressive lines. The Rev. A. C. Biddle, of Hopkinsville, and Elder T.
W. Moore, of Flat Rock, were elected commissioners to the General Assembly at Dickson, Tenn. in May.
Wednesday at eleven o'clock Rev.
A. C. Biddle preached a great sermon on "A Call to the Ministry."
In the afternoon an excellent Christian Endeavor and Sunday School program was rendered.

Wednesday night Synodical Superintendent Rev. J. T. Barbee in his drastic style delivered a powerful lecture on the sermon question.
Thursday morning previous to adjournment Rev. J. L. Price, of Providence, preached an excellent sermon to a large audience. One young man, Mr. O. D. Spence, was received under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the gospel ministry.

Ten ordained ministers were in attendance, three candidates and twenty-three elders.

Official statistics give us a presbyterial residential lay membership of 1532 and a non-residential membership of 586, making a grand total of 2118. Not so bad a showing after all since unionism has made some inroads.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

The Cumberland Presbyterian church still lives. It is not dead, though its funeral has often been preached. Vindictiveness and vituperation are not christianity, but it takes a stalwart christianity to stand when principle is assailed.

The confession of Faith is clear and comprehensive, representing a system of doctrine whose only crime is that it does not die. Devout men and women have clung to the con-fessional standards, tiding through the crucial test, until now the church through God's watch care has a footing as one of the denominations of evangelical christianity.

Cured Hemorrhages of the Lungs.

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hem-orrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bullet. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble." Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and heals the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. Refuse substitutes. J.

Two Miners in Fatal Duel.

Sturgis, Ky., April 20.—Horace Stringer and William Gooch shot
each other to death in Holeman's poolroom here, at 6 o'clock last evening, in almost the same spot where three men were killed in the fight on Christmas night between the union miners and the guards of the West Kentucky Coal company. Stringer was shot through the abdomen and heart and two balls passed through Gooch's brain. Both men died almost instantly.

Out of Sight

"Out of sight, out of mind," is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by J. H. Orme.

NOTICE.

WILLIAM COLMESNEIL

Took Out First Train Over The Ohio Valley Railroad.

The death of William T. Colmesneil a few days ago at Henderson removes from service one of the best known railroad conductors in the Ohio Valley. He was well known in Louisville, having been born within twelve miles of the city, where he grew to manhood and first entered the railroad business. He was of French extraction, his father having emigrated from France to this country and settling near Louisville a young man. William T. Colmesneil was fifty-eight years of age at the time of his death, which was the result of a complication of diseases. William T. Colmesneil was the first conductor that ever ran a train into Livingston, Ky., over the Knoxville branch of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, said a Louisville friend last night. "After leaving the Louisville and Nashville railroad he went to Texas, where he was engaged in the railroad business for a number of years. When the Ohio Valley was built from Evansville, Ind., to Princeton, Ky., in 1886, William Colmesneil was the first conductor to run a train over the road. This road was built mainly by Capt. Sam S. Brown, the Pittsburg coal king who was a personal friend of conductor Colmesneil.

Soon after the road was built through to Princeton William Brown the only son of Capt. Sam Brown, became a locomotive engineer on the road. He had an engine specially built for himself, and for a long time Billy Brown pulled the passenger train on which William Colmesneil was conductor. Billy Brown thought the world of Capt. Colmesneil as he called him. As Billy Brown was put on the road to learn the railroad business from the ground up he left the engine cab for a conductorship on a passenger train running opposite to Conductor Colmesneil.

Billy Brown was a popular fellow along the road and was known by almost everybody. He fell in love with Grace McGowan, one of the prettiest girls in Western Kentucky, who lived at Princeton, and by and by they were married. In a few months after the marriage Billy Brown sickened and died. His body was placed on a train at Princeton and taken over the road through Henderson to Pittsburg. Mr. Brown's engine which he owned individually, was draped in deep mourning and pulled the train which bore the remains away from Princeton to the Smoky City. The train itself was striped in white and black and William Colmesneil was the conductor. "Bill" Brown's death ended his father's career as a railroad magnate and soon the road was leased to the Newport News and Mississippi Valley Co., it afterwards went into the hands of a receiver. It was then purchased by the Illinois Central Railroad Company. During all these years William T. Colmesneil continued to be the head passenger conductor on the line. About a year ago the Illinois Central entered Nashville, Tenn. and then Capt. Colmesneil ran between Evansville and the Tennessee capital until he was forced to retire on account of illness about three months ago.

William T. Colmesneil married the daughter of Dr. T. W. Taylor, of Henderson, about twenty years ago. Besides a wife, he leaves two sons, Thomas and William Colmesneil Thomas is about eighteen years of age and for several years has attended the Kentucky Military Institute at Lyndon. Many well known railroad men attended the funeral of Capt. Colmesneil at Henderson, evidence of his great popularity among his associates.

It is said of Capt. Colmesneil that he knew every man, woman and child from Evansville to Nashville along his run and that he was ever ready to do all of them a favor when in his power. He was universally loved by those who knew him.—Courier Journal.

Rheumatic sufferers can have a free sample of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy with book on Rheumatism by simply writing Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. This book will explain how Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy successfully drives Rheumatism out of the blood. This remedy is not a relief only. It aims to clear the blood entirely of Rheumatic poisons, and then Rheumatism must die a natural death. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

NEW TRAIN TO BE STARTED

Trains Will Be Running May First On New Road to Morganfield and Union County.

The Hustler learns from reliable authority that a new train schedule will take effect May 1st, and that trains will be run to Morganfield under the new time card.

The tip is out that trains will be run as follows:

Train leaves Morganfield 7:15 a. m., and runs to Clarksville, Tenn., and returns to Morganfield.

Train leaves Clarksville at 7:15 a. m., and runs to Morganfield and returns to Clarksville.

It is probably that a local or mixed train will be put on between Providence and Burlington to handle the coal business.—Madisonville Hustler.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by J. H. Orme druggist. 50 cents.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Gertrude Ryan, wife of J. R. Ryan Jr., and daughter of E. P. Dever and wife, of Pinksueville neighborhood, died at her home at Salem, Ky., March 9 1907.

Sister Gertrude Dever Ryan was born Feb. 10, 1855. Was married to J. R. Ryan Jr. Feb. 3, 1904. To this union has been given two children, who survive their mother. Sister Ryan professed faith in Christ at the age of fourteen years, and though she never identified herself in church relations, yet she talked confidently of her hope in Christ, and of her joy in salvation, and had she lived no doubt would have joined the church of her choice in the near future. Sister Ryan was a bright intellectual sweet spirited woman, a faithful loving wife, a fond affectionate mother and a friend to all. She died in triumph of a living faith and has gone to a christian's reward. She leaves a husband and little children, her parents and a number of relatives, and a host of friends to mourn her loss. Card of Thanks.

Words can not express our heart felt thanks to our friends and neighbors during the sad and serious illness and death of our wife, daughter and sister. Our hearts will ever go out to them, and we shall always remember them in our prayers, and may Heaven's richest blessings rest upon them through their future life. J. W. Branson, R. L. Howerton, wife and children.

Gone Home.

It is with pleasure, yet with a feeling of incompetency that the writer endeavors to grant the request to write a brief sketch of the life, death and burial of Sister Nora Branson. How inscrutable are the ways of Providence. Who can tell why this one, or that one, is called home when he or she can least be shared. Yet we do thank God that from his blessed word and the sweet experience of his holy religion, that what he does is best for us all and we should meekly say from our hearts. "His will be done."

Nora Belle Branson, daughter of Richard and Delia Howerton, was born Jan. 30, 1875, died Apr. 10, 1907. Married to J. W. Branson Nov. 5, 1893. To this union were born six children, one dying in infancy. She professed faith in Christ at the age of fourteen, and joined Repton Baptist church in September, 1894 and was baptized in July, 1895.

She was a consistent member, loved her church, did all she could to further the cause, and bring sinners home to Christ. The church has lost a loyal member.

She had not been well for a long while, was confined to her bed three weeks with malarial fever and appendicitis when the end came.

Her funeral was preached at her home church by Rev. T. G. Hughes, her remains interred in the Repton cemetery.

The night before she died she asked to be seated in her rocking chair by the fire, and talked so beautifully and submissively for a long while about dying, admonishing her loved ones to live right, telling of her love for her church and her pastor. To those who were present her words were more impressive than any sermon. How sweet to live a christian, but sweeter still to die a christian.

Besides a husband and five little children, she leaves a father, mother, six brothers, two sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. But our loss is her gain. The family tie is broken, one link less on earth, one more in heaven.

To the sorrowing husband, motherless children, aged parents, loving brothers and sisters, we extend our heartfelt sympathy. May this great sorrow refine your hearts, purify your souls, better equip you for right living and prepare you for dying.

Her friend and admirer, Mrs. Belle Fritts.

Simple Way To Kill Catarrhal Germs in Nose, Throat and Lungs.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membrane, and restoring a healthy condition.

Hy-o-mei goes right to the spot where the catarrhal germs are present in the nose, throat and lungs and destroys the germs so that perfect health is soon restored.

A complete Hy-o-mei outfit with inhaler costs but $1.00 and is sold by Haynes & Taylor under guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

BIBLE CLASS

CONDUCTED BY REV. J. E. PRICE

The Bible Class met May 5, 1907, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. at the C. P. church. Lesson, Gen. 45-50. Review.

TYPES OF CHRIST.

- 1 Human Types.
 1. Adam represented the entire race; so did Christ, Rom. 5:15-19.
 2. Noah saved his in the ark; Christ saves the family of God, 1 Pet. 3:18-21; Gal. 3:26-29; Eph. 3:15.
 3. Melchisedec, priest of the most High God; so was Christ, Heb. 5:5-6.
 4. Isaac offered up; so was Christ, Heb. 9:28.
 5. Jacob's night of wrestling; Christ in Gethsemane.
- 11 General Types.
 1. Light; Christ the light of the world.
 2. Coat of skins; Christ our righteousness, Rev. 19:8.
 3. Ark; Christ our ark of safety.
 4. Ram, offered, sacrificed instead of Isaac; so Christ was offered.
 5. Ladder uniting heaven and earth; so does Christ's humanity.
- 111 Joseph a type of Christ.
 1. In his name, means adding, increase, fruitfulness; so with Christ, Isa. 9:6-7, Luke, 1:31, Judges, 3:30.
 2. His birth took away the reproach of Rachel, Gen. 30:24; Christ takes away the reproach of sin, Col. 2:13-15, Rom. 8:1.
 3. Jacob loved Joseph very much; The Father's love for Christ, Prov. 8:30, Isa. 42:1, Mt. 3:17.
 4. The sufferings Joseph endured

Christ hated without cause and suffered because of this hatred, Ps. 69:4, Ju. 15:29.

5. Joseph's deliverance and exaltation; the resurrection and ascension of Christ, Aeh. 2:22-24; 3:21.

6. His marriage to a Gentile woman; Christ taking the church his bride, Gentile as well as Jew.

7. His interview with his brethren, communing with them, their consciences smiting them, his making himself known to them; Christ comes to men by the Holy Spirit, their consciences smite them, he reveals himself unto them, Zech. 12:10; 13:1 Gospels.

8. His new name, Zaphnaph poanea means "food of the living," Savior through the hatred of his brethren; of the world; so was Christ, Ju. 6:48-51, Mt. 1:21.
